Introductory Panels

The panels are intended to be introductions to the respective topics, where the panelists shortly -- for 5 minutes -- present their views on the topic, and then discuss with each other and with the audience. We took special care to invite the panelists representing diverse disciplines and various career stages. For each panel, there will be a moderator for facilitating the discussion, and a scribe.

The goal of the panel is to activate all seminar participants to think about the panel topic, and about possible research directions that they might want to explore during the seminar.
